What does Full Fibre mean to me?

Quality of your connection

By having a fibre to your home, you're sure to have a reliable service each day and night, that doesn't struggle under the strain of demanding online tasks or the number of your neighbours online at the same time.

Streaming and downloading

Smart TVs are now commonplace, and many homes have more than one. 4K Ultra HD content is on the way. Full Fibre broadband is essential if you are a family that loves watching films, TV and live sport in glorious ultra-high definition. Also – say goodbye to buffering!!

Communication

VoIP, Skype, Facetime and others work at their best on this type of connection.

Smart home

Alexa, Siri and Google are now commonplace in homes, as are products that are controlled from apps using smart devices. All these products are connected to the internet and need a fast and reliable connection to work at their best.

Gaming

If there are gamers in the home, they'll love Full Fibre. The fastest of speeds with super low latency is all we need to say on this subject.

Future proofed

As products and services that are delivered via the internet become an integral part of our everyday lives, data consumption is growing fast.
Full Fibre can cope!
